A Taste for More is set in the 1960's and 1970's and is a story of mothers and daughters, against-all-odds success, generational trauma, and redefining home. The main character, Margo Dupree is a sought-after cook and the book includes recipes to go along with the story.

"...a sprawling story, full of drama, love, and humor."

Accolades for INTERMISSION!

On March 21, Intermission won the 2023 Richard Wright Literary Award in the Adult Fiction category!

This award is sponsored by the Memphis Public Library. Just think, Richard Wright couldn't even use the library in the early 1920's. He had a white man's library card and told library staff the books were for the white man.

My interview last summer was a finalist for an award from Black Authors Matter TV in the mainstream/women's fiction category.

A Taste for More is available for preorder wherever books are sold.
